GUIDING PRINCIPLES OF EARN

Members of EARN adhere to the following guiding principles in their workplaces, their service provision, and their internal and external messaging:

- Work environments and employment practices are both inclusive and accessible.
- Employment practices meet all applicable federal and provincial legislation.
- Wages for employees with disabilities are equitable with respect to the compensation of other employees (with or without disabilities) performing comparable work.
- Recruitment, hiring and on boarding practices are both inclusive and accessible.
- Employees with disabilities are included in workplace investments that support advancement and retention.
- Inclusion and accessibility practices extend to the social, cultural and recreational life of the workplace.

I acknowledge that I have read and agree to the above Guiding Principles:

If you are a service provider, an employer or community partner who is interested in working with EARN, wish to learn more about inclusionary practices and how to incorporate them into your strategic diversity and inclusion plan(s), you are welcome to attend EARN's educational events. You would have access to mentoring relationships with existing EARN members and would be considered for future membership once you have implemented these principles.
